

Pop-Star-Turned-Builder Lists $2.5M New Jersey Mansion

By Anne Giordano | Photographs Courtesy of NJLux Real Estate and WikiCommons

PHOTOGRAPHS COURTESY OF NJLUX REAL ESTATE

When Kevin Jonas retired from boy-band life, he quickly ventured off to create his own real estate development company called JonasWerner. The former musician has been building and selling New Jersey homes for years now, but one stubborn property has yet to find a buyer.

Since it's completion in 2016, this Montville mansion has been on the market twice asking $2.5 million, but maybe the third time is the charm. The luxe home is now listed for $2.488 million according to the Page Six. The five-bedroom, six-bathroom residence isn't far from RHONJ star Melissa Gorga's house, which is also currently on the market and was built by her husband.

Jonas' thoughtful touches include an Elan Smart Home system, a chic glass wine cellar in the dining room, and a huge children's playroom. Upon entrance, a grand foyer with high ceilings and a glamorous gray and white color palette welcomes you into the house.

Upstairs, the master suite is a major selling point boasting a fireplace, two large walk-in closets, a dressing room, and a bathroom with an over-sized shower and deep soaking tub. Sleek finishes throughout the house strike the perfect balance of traditional and modern style. Outside, a covered patio looks out to the lush backyard, which holds a sparkling saltwater pool with a waterfall.

Joshua M. Baris of NJLux Real Estate is the listing agent for this New Jersey gem.